Dr. Aaron S. Watkins, Prohibition presidential candidate made his first Pennsylvania address in this city this morning at 10:30 o'clock. He arrived here directly from his home in Cincinnati and was met by a delegation of Fayette county Prohibitionists taken immediately to Brimstone corner, the center of the city, the candidate having no address which touched on the best spots in the Prohibition platform.

The dry candidate rapped off Senator Warren G. Harding and Governor James M. Cox, Republican and Democratic presidential candidates for their failure to declare the new ratification for the 18th amendment and the enforcement of the Volstead Act. He had been willing to withdraw from the race if the candidates had provided one of the other candidates received the proportion before Saturday night, now he is in the field to run.

The Prohibition candidate took a healthy walk at the League of Nations covenant, a bribe back by President Woodrow Wilson.

Watkins is a干劲十足的 and Dr. Watkins, not the League of Nations. We do not yet know what it was brought back by President Wilson. I believe nine-tenths of the people in America agree with us. They are not going to swallow his program. Mr. Wilson brought back his pocket. If he had shown any willingness to compromise, he might have found that Republican senators would listen to reason. One big mistake was that the League should never have been placed as a pillar in the new treaty. We should have signed the treaty first and then said this to enable the League of Nations. As far as we are still engaged at war, it is a disgraceful situation.

Still discussing the League the candidate said Harding was endeavoring to stick to his recommendations for every farmer to do this, we want to do the same thing. Twenty-one Republicans were put on trial June 2 and they were not so bad, but corn and tankards until September 24 when they were put on trial of corn. The big gained 50 pounds per day and only consuming 250 pounds of grain per 100 pounds gain they could consume 100 less than if they were fed on dry for.

The demonstrators who held under average farm conditions of the League of Nations, I am sure, will be more successful than we are not so bad, but corn and tankards until September 24 when they were put on trial of corn. The big gained 50 pounds per day and only consuming 250 pounds of grain per 100 pounds gain they could consume 100 less than if they were fed on dry for.

These men have been turned in a corn field when they are being down corn and sometimes dry. He said didn't vary with every campaign. Touching on the Democratic candidate Governor Cox of Ohio Dr. Watkins remarked he was the second nomination candidate for the president of the nation.

Mr. Cox will have a hard time to explain where he made $300,000 using a newspaper as his political party will have to admit where he gets its campaign funds, he told his audience.

Mr. Watkins brought along a close with the summing up of the League of Nations. I am the 18th Amendment as the basis for our laws before the ratification at the next election.

While here the candidate and the only other member of the party Ray and Schmidt for an intermediate man of Indiana were elected by local figures of the Right. Schmidt, T. Scott Evans, the W. S. Sibley and Abbott Goss of Union over headed a committee which made the candidate of his arrival here.

At 1 o'clock Dr. Watkins left outside where he spoke this afternoon. Tomorrow he will make an appearance at the State Fair at Fairmont Field when he will speak to the public at the fair grounds.

A small town greeted the nominee.

TUESDAY EVENING, Sept. 28, 1920.

CHAPTER 304 VOLUNTARY

A voluntary organization was applied to, perhaps, a few weeks ago, to particular towns which had expressed the desire that they could have the right to decide whether they wanted to do their own trash collection or to let the county do it for them.

Out of this, a strong opposition to trash collection in most towns with private trash collection and a strong demand that the effect on a lot more people go after you if you don't do it.

It is noted in this article to say that all of these municipalities have been in the trash collection line. Some of them have done away with trash collection

and others have not done away with trash collection but have done away with trash collection

and others have not done away with trash collection.

Faced by such conditions, which are precisely like those prevalent many times in the past, it would seem that the time has come when counties cannot longer delay working out a garbage collection system that will prevent a recurrence of the complaints now so generally made that garbage is not being removed.

If the writer comes in the attention of the State Department of Health, it is quite possible he will be placed in the position of being compelled to take steps to meet the situation. It is right in every way more desirable to act voluntarily than under orders of the state.

PERIL OF SENSATIONAL PRICE

SHAMBLING.

While there are certain indisputable evidences that an adjustment of prices is in progress, and many dependable signs point to a decline in market values all along the line, it does not appear to be the part of wisdom to place too much reliance upon some of the very subtle price reduction propaganda now being circulated. That several clever publicity promoters have been able to "put it over" on some unsuspecting newspapers, to the extent of securing a lot of very valuable advertising under the guise of "news," the public should not jump at the conclusion that prices have begun a quick slide down the toboggan.

It should be remembered that we are in the midst of a presidential campaign within the Democratic party, to the policies of which more than the fact that a great World War has been waged is due to unprecedented losses of prices for all commodities, is lighting for its very existence. Pledged, as the party has been since before its accession to power seven years ago, to a so-called reduction of the High Cost of Living, and committed by its leaders, national platform, and candidates to this accomplishment, and the course of the campaign having developed a situation where all the issues supported by the party leaders have alike failed to arouse the interest or the enthusiasm of the voters.

The time is at hand when desperate measures must be taken in hopes of making defeat less overwhelming than it would otherwise be.

The only recourse left is to make the people believe that we are on the eve of a veritable landslide in prices and that to the virtue, wisdom, and power of the Democratic party is to be ascribed all the honor, glory, and credit of an almost over-night restoration of pre-war prices. This done, and with election but five weeks ahead, the engineers of the project can "point with pride" to another

"achievement" of the Administration in an eleventh hour appeal to the voters to sustain the fast waning days of Democracy now nearing the totality of its eclipse.

In their desperation to create such a diversion, and utterly regardless of the consequences of a sudden crash of values and the complete overturn of the monetary structure, there are individuals and agencies that would be scrupulous to use by every means at their command to precipitate conditions bordering on a panic.

We have some of these individuals and agencies here in Connellsville, like the snipers in war time who were willing to sacrifice the sum of all their might in order that they themselves might escape the dangers of taking the gun in the enemy, they would imperil every business and industry in the community to the last push necessary to throw the community into confusion and into the ruins.

That forces have to do what is now

done.

They are now

of the Giants," etc.

(C) by Peter B. Kyne

"I see it all now. It's as clear as mud," he announced finally. "You're poor old Bill and broke his heart and so he went away and hasn't had the courage to write me since. I'm afraid Bill and I both regarded this just as practical women over here as a wedding march as one might put it. I might as well confess I huddled low down from this mud just so you could get married and left at your convenience. I buried Bill's soul, all two birds with one stone, his heart and return home in his pocket and return to my wife. I had no time in operation. I buried that as a frightful song and dance you ave him."

"I suspected you were the match maker in his case. I must say I took our old enough to know better. Can you tell me? Well, what made you think so?"

She chuckled. "Oh, you're very obvious—a woman."

"I forgot that you reveal the past and to tell the future!"

"You are really very messy, Cappy! You should never try to direct the drama of any woman."

"I'm on the sick list, I've been pined and it isn't sparing of you to discuss me. You're hunting—oh, let us discuss me. Dolores, do you think Bill's eyes are absolutely hopeless?"

"At present, Cappy."

"I'm in bad shape. I've had a course of medical treatment. Seeing what Dolores thinks of me, the glasses in the corner still find her eyes. That last comment was mine and turned to his size singing softly. I'll sing that had dealt it over his shoulder of Webster's room door to the hall one night."

A Spanish singer.
"Well, you can have a look along with me paper character. Caramba will be mine. Mine too will be mine. Mine too will be mine."

He turned his head and out stepped a slender young girl in a blue dress, smiling at him. "Is there anything else in Bill's way?" he asked. "I admit it's none of my business, but—"

"You Cappy, oh, I see. I'm through with this. This is the last of me. I'm willing to go to the dogs unless that which which is him and I'll do him Phillips."

"That's about all I can say of him or him again."

"And Bill's got to live?"

"Yes, he's got to live."

"Well, I met the other day first Cappy."

"Do you mind telling me what he's been doing for living? He's a man in trouble, Billy."

"All right. This is the sum of their part or a man like Bill?"

"He's a man fully. He's a half man, but—"

"He's a man. How long have you known him?"

"Not very long."

"I'm sure you're right. Then go ahead. John Scott Webster turned over to him. Know your man before you ever buy him off the running. There's a lot of them in our neighborhood and it's a I'm sure of this man, Cappy."

He was silent a moment and rapidly while there was the slight possibility of Bill's winning, I could have died before seeing that which I wanted to say to you now. Dolores, because Bill is my friend and no one can cross him. We're related to this other man, however. I have no such code to consider. I'm pretty well convinced I'm off on him now, but I'll give that little bit if it's the last act of my life. He's a strong man and he's got the job to protect his claim so why shouldn't I do it? I can't. Am I not quite certain you're commanding a brave man to refuse him? He's come a boy not done. I may have from soul or suspender and he'd be awfully good to you. He's kind and gentle and considerate and he's not a kindly gentle either."

I can help him, Cappy. Please don't ask about him any more. I know somebody who is kind and noble and a leader. She caused a deeply painful blow to the heart, her reserves and so long too much."

"Well, if Bill's gone, he's hopeless—she's been going for him, while he held her with his strong, wistful hands. I wonder what kind of life she has. That is Dolores. —

"Yes, John?"

"I've played with my feet and I'm disappointed in girls. I'm not going to try to marry the but I want to tell you that to me you're such a very considerate man that I can't help loving you without whole heart and soul. I have expected this, John. She applied herself."

"I suppose so. I am such an old dog. I've had my dream and I've got it behind me, but I—I just want you to know I love you so long as I live. I want to serve you. When you're married to this other man, and things go to meet, just right for you both—if I have something he wants in order to make you happy. I want you to know it's yours to give to him. —I guess that's all Dolores."
